PARK IMPROVEMENT PLANNED BY COUNCIL

The City Council met last Monday evening with Mayor H. H. Smith presiding.

This being the vacation season, several officials were absent, and word came to the Council that City Attorney McCurdy would not be present as he is in the hospital, recovering from an illness contracted on his trip to Alaska.

The Postal Department notified the Council that the request for a mail box at Vista Grande avenue and Woodrow street has been complied with.

A representative from the Butchers' Union was present and asked that the Council lay the matter of their proposed ordinance over until the next meeting, owing to the absence of the committee, who intended to explain the benefit of such a law.

The condition of the lot at Park avenue and Mission street, adjoining the Vista Grande school and belonging to the city, was discussed by members of the Council. The matter will be investigated and properly taken care of, it was announced.

The Park committee reported working on a plan, and announced that the city engineer will have a sketch ready by the time of the next meeting for the approval of the Council.

Following the approval of bills and salaries for the month, the Council adjourned to meet again August 14.

BOY INJURED WHEN HE RUNS INTO CAR

Bonnie Blanchard, of 123 Vista Grande avenue, was seriously injured last Monday evening when he ran from behind a parked car on Vista Grande avenue. He did not see the approaching Chevrolet coupe driven by Charles Parker, of 369 Vista Grande avenue, and ran directly into it, strinking the fender and being thrown back against the curb. The unfortunate boy was immediately taken to the South San Francisco hospital by the driver of the machine, where he was found to be suffering from a fractured skull.

The maid of honor, Miss Rae Nawitzky, wore a turquoise blue gown, trimmed with tulle, and carried pink roses. Miss Alma Mankowitz, the bridesmaid, wore a pink taffeta gown and carried pink roses.

Mr. H. H. Lechner was the best man. The ushers were Messrs. M. Albert and Louis Plansky. Master Bertram Zalkind was the ring bearer.

The ceremony was followed by a dinner and reception for one hundred guests at the Granada Hotel. The young couple motored to Southern California on their honeymoon and upon their return will occupy their beautiful new home at 239 Hillcrest Drive, Daly City.

YOUTHS STRIP CAR AND LAND IN JAIL

When W. C. Cortell, of Rockaway Beach, went to get his car which he had parked near his home last Saturday he discovered it had been stripped of practically all detachable parts.

Seeing three young men in a car nearby, he approached and recognized portions of his car reposing in their machine. The occupants of the car became suspicious of his observation, and hurriedly drove away. A telephone call brought Constable S. A. Landini on the trail of the youths, he being joined in the chase at Daly City by Chief of Police Jack Doyle. During the chase the young men suddenly abandoned their car and seperated. Continuing their search, the officers finally captured Joe Shannon and Ed Patton near Silver avenue, but Earl Shannon, the third member of the youthful trio of lawbreakers, made his escape. The two young men captured have been turned over to the juvenile court.

DALY CITY MERCHANTS WIN ANOTHER BALL GAME

The Daly City Merchants' baseball team won another game last Sunday by a shut-out, the Gilmartin Press team of San Francisco being the victims. The score was 14 to 0. The Daly City team has lost but one game this season.

The batteries for last Sunday's game were: Daly City, B. Strand and Tomai, pitchers; Reardon and F. Strand, catchers. Gilmartin Press, J. Dolan and Lee, pitchers; Zanome, catcher.

This coming Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, the Daly City team will play Utopia Parlor, N. S. G. W., at Jefferson Union high school grounds. The home boys will have their new uniforms for this game, thanks to some of the real baseball fans we have among our business men.

The World's Market

The Southern Outing

When contemplating this trip, the idea was not to write anything concerning it, for the very good reason that too much had been written already.

It was thought that there would be nothing to write, worthy of the time and effort for both writer and reader.

But things did happen, unexpected, ludicrous, and even sensational and thrilling events crowded themselves into a period of three days.

All of which goes to prove that when the immediate future appears uninteresting, then have strong hope that something unusual will happen.

On a Pickwick stage at two forty-five in the afternoon the trip began and the destination was Paraiso Springs, a place so delightful that the wise Spanish Padres of the early days gave it their sweetest name, "paradise."

A Pickwick stage ride, on a summer afternoon, on the broad highway, through the Eden-like Santa Clara valley, presents so many charming vistas to the contemplative mind that it is a superior pleasure in itself.

As you move rapidly on your way, free from all care, the air, sweetly scented by ripening fruits and blooming flowers, grows warmer and pleasanter, constantly. Ere long it becomes a necessity to open the windows in order that the heat may be modified by the welcome breezes.

The orchard trees, breaking down with their loads of plums, prunes and pears, seem to offer to all their treasures and at the same time plead to be relieved of their heavy burdens. Much as the mouth may water for a taste of the luscious fruit, there is no time for even the shortest pause. The regular schedule must be maintained.

At San Jose there is a stop of five minutes to give the passengers an opportunity to get out and look around, or possibly to regale themselves with a soft drink, while necessary rerouting goes on.

All seated and set again, the Pickwick plunges forward out of the Garden City and along the straight highway, none more beautiful, for thirty miles to Gilroy.

One rides so comfortably and distance is overcome so incidentally that a feeling of desire to praise the success of modern public conveyance takes complete possession of the mind.

San Juan, a fine composite of the oldest and the newest styles of architecture, claims, as always, more than passing attention. It is a place where the curious investigator might dream days away and yet never arrive at a satisfying solution, why our state has always been favored, so generously, with spots of enchantment.

Then winding up the grade and down to Salinas relieves the mind of the pleasant monotony of level roads. The Pickwick never hesitates going up or down. Its power is equal to all demands and its driver, alertly cautious, shoots by every obstacle.

Salinas loomed into prominent notice, all decorated with electric lights, flags and streamers for the big rodeo program, and a big street carnival was offering its varied attractions. The streets were alive with excitement and everyone was on edge with expectancy. It is unnecessary to write that every inhabitant was fully obsessed with the superior enterprise of his city.

The inclination to stay and take part in the gala festivities was hard to resist, but the inability to find a resting place forbade lingering. After twenty minutes and a very light supper the Pickwick was carrying the traveler down the Salinas valley on his way to Soledad (solitude), where an automobile was waiting to take him to his destination, Paraiso Springs, the place at which so many have found relief from pains and ills.

Fortunately no physical infirmity disturbed his peace of mind. He sought the famous resort wholly for its beauty. As he went into his room there, in the Spreckels lodge, he congratulated himself upon his afternoon's trip, remarkable for being perfectly full of pleasure and free from all disappointments. He was sort of well pleased with himself and everything else in particular.

How suddenly and humorously a change will come! When he opened his suit case before retiring, he saw a pair of shoes and everything else, the personal property of some woman. He laughed at first, at the ludicrous mistake that had been made in spite of his check. Then he subsided as he thought of the chagrin of the lady and his own suit case on the Pickwick to Los Angeles. Generalship was necessary to avert the fair one's distress and his own. With the assistance of Mr. Peterson, the proprietor of Paraiso Springs, and the telephone, he reached the Pickwick agent at San Luis Obispo, ahead of the stage, telling of the mistake that had been made and that his suit case might be identified as being unlocked and containing a book entitled "The Broad Highway."

As he stretched himself upon his excellent bed he did not fall asleep at once. Was it the strange surroundings that kept him awake? Did he recall too vividly the career of Claus Spreckels, who had the lodge built so that he might sojourn at Paraiso? Was the rapid flight of years and his lost youth disturbing him? Oh no, none of these forbade his mind to relax. He was ill at ease on account of the misplaced suit cases.

Morning came at last and he went forth, but not sooner than the story of the suit cases. A professor offered him the use of his toilet articles, good naturedly. A prominent next door guest said he had seven razors with him and would lend one. His wife said he could spare a nightrobe, too. Possibly this next door guest was a relative of Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York, he was so well supplied.

Others indulged their love of humor by asking numerous questions as to how he managed with the contents of the suit case that had fallen to his lot.

Altogether the incident proved very amusing and really of value for the notice it secured. Before noon a trip was made to the stage office at Soledad to deposit the lady's suit case. Faint hope that the other might be there was entertained. The lucky star was shining. It was handed out to him when he turned the other in. He felt so good when he saw his own once more he was sorry he did not send a message of good will in the other.

His good fortune continued. While strolling along a street in Soledad, waiting for his ride back to Paraiso, he came in contact with a radio, to which he listened in and heard Mayor James Rolph introduce Mayor James Walker, and every word of the latter was like the voice in the wilderness, telling of the other man from New York, greater than he.

The traveler regretted that he must miss Mayor Walker's reception, when he started out, but how strange it was that he should accidentally have all the thrill it afforded, one hundred and fifty miles away.

For the remaining half a day, Thursday, all Friday and until three thirty on Saturday, he enjoyed all the benefits of Paraiso Springs. He walked its pleasant pathways, bathed in its natural hot water, conversed with its friendly guests, told stories to entertain, marveled at its big tree covered with pink flowers, estimated the height of its ancient palms, sat and listened under the gossip oak, danced in its ball room to the music of the electric phonograph, discussed politics and finance with the professor, helped the maidens get astride their saddle horses, noticed that the cotton-tails were very numerous this year, and read many chapters of the "Broad Highway." Such were his hours of idyllic ease. Thus he enjoyed Paraiso until three thirty o'clock P. M. on Saturday, July 21, 1928.

At that time, while reading an interesting chapter, in his room (it was too hot to be out), he heard the thrilling cry of "Fire!" Upon investigating he soon saw that the roof of the kitchen, connected with the main building, was burning modestly. Hose was procured and attached to a stand pipe. A ladder was leaned against the wall of the kitchen. A young man climbed up. The water was turned on, but there was little force. However for a while it seemed that the water was overcoming the blaze. All the guests gathered. There was not much alarm. The fire would be put out, as a matter of course. But no; it gained. All the kitchen roof was on fire. The shingles were as dry as tinder, seeming willing to be burned. Soon the ceiling of the kitchen fell down inside and somebody shouted "Cut the oil lines," and another said disgustedly, "Why do not the firemen from Soledad come?" The flames gave up their semblance of modesty and roared in fierceness. They seemed to know that no power at hand could control them. They reached for the main building and at once it was at their mercy.

The beautiful dining room was doomed, the glassed-in porch likewise; the cosy card room and the office shared the same fate.

Wildly the ravenous flames exuletd. They shot up the ancient palms, they left the friendly gossip oak a blackened stump, the pink flowered tree withered before them, they swept away the bath house, the ball room and the garage.

When the main building was all on fire, the oil tank exploded, scattering embers here and there. The guests then sought their rooms, in the circle, and packed their suit cases hastily. The scene of ease and contentment was changed to one of direful anxiety. The beauty and peace of Paraiso Springs was no more. Fire and half an hour had accomplished the destruction.

The firemen of Soledad arrived as soon as they could and saved the Annex and a number of the smaller buildings. Without their work the loss, which is irreparable, would have been greater.

This resort and its buildings were dear to a large number of people of this state, and especially so to the writer, who feels it his duty to write the story of its destruction, since it was fated that he should witness its burning, with tear-dimmed eyes.

The cause of the fire was the explosion of coal oil, in the kitchen range, through the mismanagement of a new Chinese cook, just beginning his work.

Patrons of the resort, throughout the state deeply sympathize with Mr. and Mrs. Peterson and their whole family, all of whom were interested in the proprietorship and management of this popular resort. It is to be hoped that the destroyed buildings will be rebuilt, but no one can replace the trees.

COST RATIO OF NEW ROAD DECIDED UPON

Eighty-five per cent of the cost of continuing the Junipero Serra boulevard from its present terminus at the San Francisco county line to Capuchino, directly west of Lomita Park, estimated at $2,800,000, will be contributed by San Francisco county. San Mateo county will bear the other 15 per cent of the expense for the proposed extension.

Decision as to the division of the cost had been hanging fire for several weeks, but the final ratio which it was decided would be fair to both counties was successfully reached at a meeting last Monday. Representatives of San Mateo county met Supervisors Andrew Gallagher and Alfred Roncovieri of San Francisco to agree upon the division.

1928 Peach Pack Exceeds Last Year's

California's pack pack this year will run 20 per cent above that of 1927, and the price also shows a 10 per cent increase, as a result of the arbitration conferences between the growers, canners and state committee members, Governor Young declared on Tuesday.

McCann's Death Accidental

The death of Mark A. McCann, Jr., son of a wealthy Peninsula real estate dealer, who died in a Bay Shore highway accident early Sunday morning, was "accidental," a coroner's jury agreed after an inquest held in South San Francisco.

AERIAL SURVEY FOR OCEAN SHORE ROAD

Early beginning of construction work on the San Francisco-Santa Cruz link of the great Ocean Shore highway, which ultimately will link all the coutries bordering on the Pacific from Vancouver, B. C., to the southernmost point in California, is forecast in the letting of a contract for an aerial survey of the eighty-eight mile stretch, according to sponsors of the highway in California.

The contract for the aerial reconnaisance was let recently by the Tri-Counties Highway District, comprising the counties of San Francisco, San Mateo and Santa Cruz, which was organized some weeks ago for the express purpose of constructing this link of the proposed great international highway along the Pacific.

It is expected that when the proposed route for the relocated and reconstructed highway has been reconnoitered by airplanes, it will then be accurately surveyed by ground parties in order to definitely stake out the route to be followed. Within a short time thereafter it is proposed to begin construction work, which will be in charge of Clyde Healy, assistant city engineer of San Francisco.

Aerial surveys are made by special planes which fly over the proposed route at a specified altitude. The camera, pointed directly downward, is operated at a uniform speed by a small motor, or by the photographer. When the pictures are developed and printed, they are often matched into a mosaic strip map of the ground, showing it in all its detail. Pictures are taken on films more than 100 feet long.

Such airplane surveys permit the location of a highway route with much accuracy, and eliminate much unnecessary labor and expense when the troute is finally located by a gorund survey party.

This method of making accurate and rapid surveys is not new on the Ocean Shore highway. When the route was surveyed in the state of Washington, the United States Bureau of Public Roads made an aerial survey of the proposed route.

"THE PICKUP" TO BE SUBJECT AT THE METHODIST CHURCH

"The Pickup" will be the Sunday evening subject at the Daly City Methodist church. Even though it is summer time and folks are away on vacations, the evening church service is beginning once more to grow. We invite you to come and enjoy the service with us.

The Junior League for girls between the ages of 10 and 14 meets every Sunday evening at 6 o'clock.

The Epworth League for all young people of the community meets at 7 o'clock.

Sunday school at 10 o'clock, with classes for all ages. We invite you to come, and once having come we are sure you will return again.

We are anxious to develop in Daly City one of the finest church plants on the Peninsula. We are also anxious that a revival may sweep this church and this community. Will you pray for it? We need the Holy Spirit in our midst. Begin now.

The church of my dreams is a beautiful church,
With a steeple high, of its hopes to tell,
With flowers sweet at its altar's feet,
And silver song on a sounding bell.

The church of my dreams is a holy church,
And the spirit of God is ever there
To guide the sermon and lead the song,
And answer the pleading voice of prayer.

The church of my dreams is a beautiful church,
Where all are bound in a brotherhood
To strengthen the weak and nurture the young,
And stand for the right and true and good.

Oh beautiful, friendly, comforting church,
Wherever your open doors I see,
I know there's a city of refuge fair,
And a place of service that waits for me!

LAKE GIVES UP THE BODY OF GIRL DROWNED SUNDAY

BANCITALY PROFITS EXCEED ALL RECORDS

Profits earned by the Bancitaly Corporation during the first six months of 1928 were far in excess of $90,000,000, and according to students of finance who have examined the semi-annual report released for publication last Monday by the giant investment trrst, may have been more than $100,000,000.

Norman net earnings as given in the report were $35,233,552. Profits from the transactions involving the Bank of America N. A., Bowery and East River National Bank and Commercial Exchange National Bank, estimated at between $40,000,000 and $60,000,000, are not considered in the statement.

The net earnings item does not include either $11,997,622 added to the reserve account and set aside for taxes and contingencies, or the sum expended in liquidation of $32,000,000 in bills payable.

The normal profits reported for the period covered by the statement, January 20 to July 19, set a new high record, being greater in proportion than in any previous year of the corporation's existence. They were more than six times dividend requirements for the first two quarters. It is pointed out that if the same level of earnings is maintained for the ensuing six months the stock will have earned $13 per share, or in excess of 11 per cent on the present market value of the stock.

L. M. Giannini, executive vice-president, in commenting upon the statement, said:

"From the standpoint of normal earnings and investment return, this has been an even more profitable period of operation than was anticipated. While as much as a year ago the likelihood of profits being maintained at the high levels then enjoyed was questioned and stockholders were asked not to expect that records established during boom times could be sustained permanently, nevertheless, because of continuing prosperous conditions throughout the nation, earnings have exceeded all normal expectations."

The balance sheet of Bancitaly, as of July 19, reveals that the corporation now has total assets of $294,943,950.77, as against $289,215,994.36 on January 20.

During the six months period, Bancitaly Corporation paid more than $28,000,000 in cash to the capital of the Bank of America, over and above the stock of the other New York banks which it turned in when the recent merger with the Bowery and East River and the Commercial Exchange was effected.

The statement shows that there has been a complete liquidation of all bills payable, an item which stood at $32,656,868.30 on January 20. It also shows that reserves, which stood at $1,500,000 on January 20, have been increased to $13,497,622.41.

Surplus and undivided profits have increased to $149,971,328 from $120,561,776 in January and in this total no profits on the Bank of America deal are included.

As against $8,593,316 in cash reported at the first of the year, Bancitaly Corporation now has $20,485,751.68 in banks and in the call loan market.

Although the securities account is carried on the books at $254,972,867, as against $252,430,801.28 in January, this figure is actually below cost or market price, whichever is lower. The published list of holdings, including only representative securities in which the corporation has an investment at present market prices of approximately $1,000,000 or more, together with a group of smaller holdings, show an actual current value considerably in excess of the figure at which this item is reported in the statement.

Offices have been opened in New York, Chicago, London, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Baltimore, and other strategic points throughout the United States and Europe have been selected for establishment of additional offices at a future date.

SEES SCANDAL TELLING FATAL IN SMALL TOWN

Tale bearing and scandal mongering are two of the surest paths to unhappiness to the person living in a small town, in the opinion of one small town woman philosopher and author who has spent he entire life in such a locality.

Outlining ten recipes for happiness in the small town, Mrs. Dorothy Walworth Carman of Maplewood, N. J., writing in the American Mazazine, considers a sense of humor the most important requirement if the small town dweller is to know happiness.

"A sense of humor will keep the little events which crowd in on a small town dweller from seeming calamitous," says Mrs. Carman. "Your day will not be completely ruined because the neighbor's dog tracked up your newly washed porch. Humor is more than a nice thing to have around the house. There is a ministry about it."

Among other requirements for small town happiness Mrs. Carman lists tolerance, kindliness, human interest, discretion, neighborliness, contentment, magnanimity, modesty and interest in work.

"Bear no grudge if you want to be happy in a small town," Mrs. Carman warns. "Be slow to take offense. Overlook much. And when it comes your turn to forgive, be a good forgiver."

Another fortunate quality for the small town dweller, says Mrs. Carman is the possession of a hobby, which she believes, keeps people absorbed and makes them forget to be "touchy."

GRADE FARM PRODUCTS

No farmer would expect to sell at a good price a barrel filled with onions, and cucumbers, turnips and potatoes, all mixed together. It is almost as foolish to expect to get the best market price for a barrel of a single product in which all sorts are dumped without regard to size, color or cleanliness.

By neglecting to properly grade their produce, many farmers must sell it for much less than might be obtained for the same stuff by exercising a little care in preparing it for the market. In discussing this important phase of marketing an expert says:

"Quality and uniformity in grains, fruit, cotton, potatoes, dairy and poultry products command a premium from the buyer. A crate of large, clean eggs of uniform color will bring more in a central market than one in which small, dirty, many colored eggs are included. Dirty potatoes of mixed sizes sell poorly alongside of clean ones that have been graded."

The difference in price between graded and ungraded products often means the difference between profit and loss in farming operations.

STATE THEATRE PROMISES UNUSUALLY FINE PICTURES

The State Theatre, at Mission and Oliver streets, promises some unusual entertainment the coming week. On Saturday, July 28, the patrons of the State will see Marion Davies and Conrad Nagel in "Quality Street." The juvenile entertainers will also be present.

Next Sunday there will be a double feature bill, Rin Tin Tin in "The Hills of Kentucky," and Irene Rich in "The Climbers."

Next Monday and Tuesday, July 30 and 31, a picturization of Helen Hunt Jackson's American love cdassic, "Ramona," in which Dolores Del Rio and Warner Baxter are starred, will be presented.

On Wednesday and Thursday, August 1 and 2, that most interesting picture, "The Legion of the Condemned," will be presented.

The bill for Friday, August 3, includes Sally O'Neil and Alan Forrest in "The Lovelorn."

BETTER THAN A DEED

An old negro had just paid the last installment on a small farm when the realtor who sold it said, "Well, Uncle Joe, I will make you a deed to the farm now since it has been paid for."

"Boss," the old darkey replied, "if it am all de same to you I had much rather you would give me a mortgage to de place."

The realtor somewhat surprised, said, "Uncle Joe, you don't seem to know the difference between a mortgage and a deed."

"Well, maybe not," said Uncle Joe reminiscently, "but I owned a small farm once to which I had a deed and de Fust National Bank had a mortgage and de bank got de farm."

Since the war the creation of new countries and the re-naming of old cities have served to repeal about all the geography we learned in school.

One doesn't always express what is at the bottom of his heart by what he shouts at the top of his voice.

Miss Ellen C. Morse and Miss Caroline D. Putman of Boston have resigned after serving 70 and 55 years, respectively, as Sunday School teachers.

Miss Sarah Maybee of Huntington, N. Y., has retired after teaching school continuously for 57 years, during which she was absent from duty only one day.

Dr. Eva E. Strahan of Poplarville, Miss., not only passed the examination in all 12 subjects required for medical license in the state, but also made the highest average in a group of 25 applications taking the examination.

Miss Helen Wills, American tennis star, retained the championship in the women's singles recently by defeating Senorita Elia de Alvarez at Wimbledon, England.

Miss E. L. Willinger, the only blind telephone operator in Baltimore, has won the commendation of her employers for the speed and accuracy of connections effected by her.

SERVED HIM RIGHT

An Irishman was seated in a train beside a pompous individual who was accompanied by a dog.

"Foine dog ye have," said the Irishman. "Phwat kind is it?" "A cross between an Irishman and an ape," the man replied. "Shure, an' it's related to both of us!" the Irishman rejoined.

SAFETY AT ITS BEST

Organization is as necessary in safety as it is in all the other actvities of life, if the best results are to be obtained, says a writer in the current issue of California Safety News. This truism is everywhere supported by the facts and by experience. One of the largest of the fraternal societies exemplifies this by using the example of a single stick in comparison with a number of sticks tied together. The first example shows how easy it is to break the solitary stick, but when the same effort is made on those in collective capacity, it is impossible to make the least impression, for they are tightly welded in numbers and the thongs keep them intact.

The Industrial Accident Commission of the State of California welcomes the help of organizations and of individuals in the accident-prevention crusade. It is proud to align itself with all the friends of safety, and to have members of its staff join organizations that further the cause. The U. S. Bureaus that are active in saving life, the National Safety Council, the Society of Safety Engineers of California, the experts in insurance and in private employment, trade unions and employers' associations, and citizens wherever they may be found, are co-workers of the right kind. There is room for all. A fall usually comes for those who would place themselves in solitary grandeur, especially when lacking support.

And so the Commission is anxious to serve, to join hands with others, and to be alert at all times to build up industrial safety in its truest sense, the outcome of comradeship and that feeling of democracy which recognizes the good in all.

WOMEN ARE MORE STUDIOUS THAN MEN

Women predomonate in the registration at the Summer Session of the University of California at Los Angeles this year by a ratio of almost four to one. This is disclosed in an analysis of figures on attendance at the registrar's office which announced that nearly 175 more students are enrolled this summer theat were entered in 1927.

Of the 3658 students now taking courses at the University, 2915 are women and 743 are men. Last summer, with the total registration amounting to 3483, 2821 were women and 662 were men.

In age the students range from 15 years to men and women well advanced in life. Although no record is kept of the ages of those over 70, there are more than a score who are close to the age of 50.

This year's enrollment of men shows one 16 years of age; five of 17 years; twenty-six of 18 years; fifty-four who are 19; fifty-eight who are 20, and 599 older than 20.

Of the women there is one 15 years of age; two of 16; sixteen aged 17 years; seventy-four who are 18; 152 aged 19; 231 aged 20; and 2439 more than 20 years of age.

THE RETURN OF ANTHONY TRENT

STORY FROM THE START

Anthony Trent, once master criminal, now reformed, returns to New York after four years' absence. He learns his friend, Capt. Frank Sutton, is in Sing Sing. Trent is surprised to find his New York apartment occupied by a stranger, Campbell Sutton, who represents himself as the brother of Frank Sutton. Trent is asked by Campbell to force a confession from Payson Grant, whom he accuses of having crookedly obtained all of Frank Sutton's property and then married the latter's wife. Trent starts on a campaign to accomplish the downfall of Grant. He learns that Captain Sutton has escaped from Sing Sing and later, to his surprise, finds that Campbell is really Frank Sutton. Trent takes his place in society as the opening gun of his campaign against Grant. He becomes a house guest of the Grants. Trent discovers in Mademoiselle Dupin, Natica's French instructor, a friend of the old criminal days. She is now going straight. Trent is suspicious of a man known as Yeatman, ostensibly in the Grant household as a detective. Anthony realizes Yeatman is a crook, who is planning to rob the Grants and their guests.

She looked at him with a calmness and lack of interest that she knew must surprise him. He was the kind to frighten women with physical violence, and had been used to inspiring fear.

"If you need money, I have none. If you need help, I shall not give it."

"You aristocrats have spirit," he admitted. "Listen. I am of les ouvriers. I was a fisherman at Heyst before I followed a woman to Bruxelles and strangled her because she laughed at me. You would not think to look at me I am so strong. Well, Mademoiselle Dupin, I am not going to strangle you yet."

Another scarlet-tipped cigarette was tossed from the window. There was no evidence of haste about him. He showed that he could afford to take his time.

"You say you will not help me. Very good. I do not need your help. I have already arranged everything. You have no money? What do I care? I am a man who likes the aristocrats."

"Pierre Redlich," she said slowly, "you are talking folly. You have no hold over me at all. I shall not help you and I shall not hinder you so long as you remain a detective. If you steal, you place me in peril, and I dare not risk that. Let us call it a truce. You have no power over me. Make no mistake about that."

He picked up the orange packet. "Here are twenty cigarettes left. I shall sit here and smoke them. When I have finished, you will come with me."

She did not understand what he meant. But she was oppressed with the certainty that he would not threaten idly.

"Are you, then, so anxious to go back to France and finish your term? They do not pamper prisoners there as they do here."

"That I know," he retorted, "I have tried them both. No, madam, I am not anxious to go back. And I shall not. I used to wonder why others succeeded always and I was so poor and obscure." Redlich touched his forehead. "It is here that success is manufactured. Education, madam, knowledge. We Flemands learn languages easily. I have studied. I speak five as well as you do. Particularly well do I speak Spanish. It is to a land where they speak Spanish we are going."

"We?" she queried. "Pierre Redlich, you have become insane."

"No, madam. I am neither insane nor inflamed with drink. What I say, I mean. I have had you in my heart since I first saw you. I recognized you here before you saw me in Mrs. Grant's room. You were sitting by the sea reading, with no thought of danger. It was only when I came into Mrs. Grant's room that my pride was gratified. I saw that you had forgotten me. That pleased me. I saw you were frightened, and that pleased me even more."

She glanced at the alarm clock. It was midnight.

"I am tired," she said. "If you do not go I shall summon help. On one side the housekeeper sleeps, and on the other the butler. I have only to shout loudly and they will come."

Again there was that baffling, confident smile.

"Madam does not believe me when I say I have gained much wisdom since last I saw her. I will prove it. Miss Brewen is not there. When she went to her room tonight she found a rat there. It terrified her, and she sleeps in another part of the house. How do I know? Because I killed it for her. I also placed it in her room. As for the butler, he knows now that I am here as a detective. I have commanded him to sleep near his footmen so that he may observe their movements. I have told him I suspect them."

She was convinced that he was speaking the truth.

"This leaves none but you and me on this corridor. The quarters of the servants cannot be entered from it. You did not observe in your terror that I locked the door as I passed in. There is the open window, madam. Jump if you will. The marble terrace twenty meters below will make a tender deathbed.

She believed implicitly that she was trapped. Redlich was of the sort who have brought the terrorizing of women to a fine point. He rose and urged her to the window. She could barely see a white light waving gently at what she supposed was the bottom of the garden.

"It is the masthead light of my vessel," he said. "She is called La Belle Alliance, and I have wondered why she had that name. Now I know, madam. You and I shall be 'la belle alliance.' On board are a half-dozen men who do as I command. Presently I shall take you to them and say: 'Here is the woman I love.' Tomorrow I will come back for the jewels they pay me to guard."

"Do you suppose you can carry me there and not be seen?"

"I know it. Did I not tell you I had grown careful. You knew me in the old days, madam, when I was no better than a savage. Then, I should have beaten you senseless and carried you off. Now, I shall not hurt you."

He moved forward, twisted her arms behind her and pressed over her mouth and nose a chloroform-saturated towel. She fought for a long time, but the buzzing in her ears grew louder, and presently her muscles relaxed and consciousness left her.

* * * * * * *

Anthony Trent had been glad to get to his room early. By eleven all of the guests had retired. Always a lover of the sea, Trent pulled the wicker chaise longue to the window and lighted a cigar. He had turned out the lights the better to enjoy the night, the stars and the flickering lights of passing vessels.

Suddenly there floated onto the balcony the glowing end of a cigarette thrown from some other open window such as this. Five minutes later another fluttered by to the terrace below. After similar intervals the stub on the balcony was joined by another. By twelve o'clock Trent had counted a dozen descend; somewhere above him a man was smoking cigarettes at the steady rate of twelve an hour. . . . With the last crimson end, came a sudden gust of wind and blew it into the room clear over Trent's head.

He rose from his seat to extinguish it ere a hole was burned in the carpet. It was the end of a brand of cigarette used almost solely by the French. One day he had smelled the undisguisable odor and found old Gimbert puffing at one; Gimbert said Mr. Yeatman had offered it. It was unlikely that anyone else would have such a supply or consume them so resolutely.

Yeatman occupied a small room at the head of the first flight of steps leading from the main hall. Under no conceivable circumstance could a cigarette thrown from the small window of this room drift down to Trent's balcony. Gravity forbade, for one thing.

Three people used the rooms of the floor above that on which Trent's suite was situated. He knew that immediately above him was the room of Mademoiselle Dupin. It was conceivable that she smoked. But these coarse cigarettes in such unbelievable quantity were, he felt certain, consumed by some one else. Circumstances pointed to Yeatman. And what could Yeatman be doing there?

Very quietly, Trent crept to the little balcony and listened intently. He could barely hear some one talking rapidly in French. It was not the beautiful French of Madame de Beaulieu. The speaker was fluent enough, but lacked that delicate rhythm of the language as spoken by an educated woman.

When Trent had first examined his suite he had noticed that at this southeastern corner of the building a steel rod, a third of an inch in thickness, part of a device for protection from lightning, ran down to the earth. This rod of steel passed the edge of his balcony some two feet distant. On its way to the cornice above, it passed Mademoiselle Dupin's window at an equal distance. A man with a clear head and a sense of balance might make an ascent or descent without much danger.

Straining his ears, Trent was sure he heard, later, the higher-pitched voice of the woman for whose safety he was exercised. It was when it was raised in undisguised fear that he acted. Climbing back into his room, he drew on a pair of heavy gloves. Then he started the ascent of the rod. It was not easy to draw his face level with the window ledge. Fortunately he kept himself in perfect physical condition. As he pulled himself breast high to the sill the sweet and cloying odor of chloroform met him.

Mademoiselle Dupin was lying on the floor unconscious. Over her, Yeatman was stooping, tying her, hand and foot, with ropes adjusted with the sailor's dexterity. There was evidence of a struggle. Chairs was overturned and a vase of cut flowers was broken.

The horrified sight kept Trent immobile for the moment. While he watched, Yeatman picked up the unconscious girl, opened the door and switched off the lights.

Anthony Trent climbed into the room as quickly as he could and opened the door. In the corridor outside was in darkness. In the distance his sharp ears heard, distinct in the stillness of the silent house, the cautious tread of the burdened man half muffled by the rugs.

Yeatman, as he opened an unlatched door, had no idea the silent Trent was within a few yards of him. He kept to a little path which ran by the brick wall. A quarter-mile distant was the beach where his boat lay. By a code of flashlight signals he could summon help and be on board La Belle Alliance within a few minutes. He would, of course, come back to the house and see that the room just left in such confusion was put in order. He had no desire for local police interest.

Half-way between house and ocean was a fresh-water bathing pool with garden marbles set about it. On one of these Pierre Redlich placed the still unconscious girl. He was alarmed at her continued stupor. The thought that she might be dead chilled him. He leaned down to hear the heart beat. And, as he stooped, he was conscious of a tremendous blow behind his ear. The swift appreciation of the pain was succeeded instantly by unconsciousness. Pierre Redlich dropped as one dead.

He was profoundly unconscious as Trent untied the girl and used the same ropes and gag for her assailant. He did not feel himself lifted by Trent and carried to the brick wall and dropped on the other side of it. Here, concealed in a part of a neighbor's garden devoted to the raising of vegetables, his dreamless sleep continued.

Mademoiselle was awakened from the anesthetic by the dashing of cold water on her face. Out of the mists of memory she thought she heard Trent's voice. Then the fear of Redlich returned and she began to struggle.

"It's all right, you poor child," Trent said tenderly. "I'm here and he has gone."

He assisted her to a seat nearer the house where their voices could not carry to Redlich's vegetable bed. She was still unstrung and nervous.

Humorous Talk Went Unheeded After That

A good Bret Harte story is told by William H. Crane, the veteran actor, in "Footprints and Echoes." Bret Harte was engaged to deliver a humorous lecture in a small western city. Just after he had started, one of the deacons sitting on the stage grabbed hold of his coat and whispered:

"Hold on a minute, I want to make an announcement."

Harte was very much astonished and stepped aside, while the deacon took the center of the platform.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, after a pause, "is Mr. Rogers C. Jones in the hall?"

There was a protracted pause and, as Mr. Jones failed to respond, the deacon continued:

"Well, if he is, I have the pleasure to say that his wife has just died."

As everyone in the small city was intimately acquainted with Mrs. Jones, Harte's task, giving a humorous lecture, was far from successful.

Chip Off the Old Block

While the spelling lesson was going on, the teacher gave the class words to use in sentences. Addressing ten-year-old Junior, the drum major's son, she asked, "Junior, will you use the word banquet correctly in a sentence?"

After deep deliberation and a thought concerning his father's vocation Junior replied: "When the speaker stepped upon the platform, the 'band-quit.'"

True American Spirit

The phrase, "Don't give up the ship!" is attributed to James Lawrence. American naval officer, who commanded the Chesapeake, an American ship, in the encounter with the British ship, Shannon. Lawrence was wounded early in the encounter in the leg, but retained his post on the deck. He was mortally wounded a second time, and while being carried below, noticing that the crew was hesitant, cried, "Boys, don't surrender the vessel!"

Wealth From Waste

Aluminum, so popular for the manufacture of pots and kettles, may be superseded or find a close rival in a ew metal called beryllium. Extracted from ores previously dumped away as waste, beryllium promises special value in making kitchen utensils, frames for airships and pistons for motor cars.

It is about a third lighter than aluminum yet much harder, with four times its elasticity. It resists salt water, which corrodes aluminum, and seems unaffected by liquids and fumes. Its light gray color takes on a polish like that of fine steel.

Punctuation

Time values for punctuation are given in the method of pointing known as rhetorical punctuation. Here the comma is said to indicate a pause long enough to count one, a semi-colon two, a colon three and a period four. Since readers would vary in rapidity of reading and counting punctuation according to grammatical circumstance is usually followed.

House Made Famous

The location of the house in which Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Indepence was on the south side of Market street, Philadelphia, between Seventh and Eighth streets. The house is no longer standing, but the desk upon which he wrote has been preserved and is the property of the federal government.

Places for Noses

The grindstone is no place for a man to keep his nose, but it is better there than in other folks' affairs.

Two Sorts of Work

Scientists say that four hours' hard mental work is as physically exhausting as eight hours' manual work.

Men and Music

Dr. Thomas Arnold of Rugby was entirely lacking in musical taste. Speaking of this defect, he says: "I can no more remedy it than I could make my mind mathematical, or than some men could enter into the deep delight with which I look at a wood anemone or wood-sorrel."

Dean Hook used to maintain that Handel's "Messiah" had turned more sinners to righteousness than had all the sermons that were ever preached. —Exchange.

Intelligence

Intelligence is an inherited characteristic which grows year by year in childhood, and is fully developed about sixteen or seventeen, after which you may cultivate the mind through study and experience; but not by the measure of a brain cell can you increase your "intelligence." Many grown-ups, and some of them successful as the world counts success, if tested scientifically, would find that their "intelligence" was no more than that of their schoolboy son of twelve.—Glasgow Herald

Damascus Is Oldest

The oldest city in the world still in existence is Damascus. It is probable that there are ruins of other cities antedating Damascus. Excavations in Central America indicate that some of the oldest cities in the world may originally have stood in these countries. This has not yet been definitely established.

Shakespeare's "Borrowing"

The famous biographies by Plutarch (46-120 A. D.) were of undoubted service to Shakespeare in writing historical plays, "Julius Caesar," "Anthony and Cleopatra," "Coriolanus" and others. Plutarch spent most of his life writing his "Lives" of Greek and Roman celebrities.

A rainbow sometimes may be seen all day long in a cloudless sky in Siberia. It is said to be due to reflection of the sun on fine particles of snow in the air.

Animal or What?

Julia had been invited to accompany her grandparents to the zoo. When preparing for the trip Junior, Julia's younger brother, asked where his sister was going. His mother told him that Julia's grandmother and grandfather were going to take her to the zoo. Junior asked his mother whether that was not the place where they kept animals. Being assured that it was, he said: "Why are they taking her there? Is she going to turn into an animal or what?"

Hysteria Hits Dogs

Hysteria, or what is known as "fright disease" in some southern states of this country, has attacked valuable racing greyhounds of England. On one day, four were ill at the Burnley track, and three at Salford. According to Maj. F. Hopkins, official veterinary surgeon to the Greyhound Racing association, the complaint is new to England, and is believed to have been imported from the United States. It comes to a dog without warning, and the animal goes off "into the blue," cries wildly and becomes uncontrollable.

Manner of Doing It

Whatever we are, high or lowly, learned or unlearned, married or single, in a full house or dwelling in quietness, we have our daily round of work, our duties of affection, obedience, love, mercy, industry, and the like; and that which makes one man differ from another is not so much what things he does, as his manner of doing them.—Cardinal Manning.

Recovering

"Oh I'm coming along, thank ye," cheerily piped old man Totterly, who was ill. "I'm getting weller all the time. I can quarrel with my son-in-law a little, and hope to hold him level after a while. Yes, siree! I'll be strong enough to play checkers by and by."—Philadelphia Record.

BOY SCOUTS' LONG TRIP

Four Boy Scouts of Eagle rank are now traveling the Lincoln highway from New York to San Francisco, a distance of about 3,100 miles, in their own covered wagon, in connection with a unique plan to install concrete markers along the route.

They will see that these markers are distributed at uniform distances throughout the length of the highway, after which at an appointed time Boy Scout troops will install the posts along the entire 3,100 miles of road in a single day.

This is but another instance of the usefulness of the Boy Scouts, who have lent their aid to so many public enterprises as a part of their helpful program.

Daly City is fortunate enough to have Boy Scouts in its midst, who are doing their bit for the betterment of this community every day, and the citizens of this communiy should not be backward in lending their aid and encouragement to their Boy Scouts. Their financial needs should be graciously met by our enterprising citizens, and they should be given every encouragement to enlarge their membership and the scope of their work.

A TRIP TO THE MOON

Numerous ideas hitherto considered utterly fantastic have been advanced concerning the possibility of a trip to the moon or to Mars, but it has remained for a society of French astronomers to take the idea seriously from a scientific standpoint.

Not that these scientists expect to see an actual venture of this kind undertaken in the near future, but for the purpose of studying its possibilities, has the new "astronautic commission" been formed, composed of the most distinguished members of the Astronomical Society of France, including its president, E. Fichot.

As a beginning a prize of 5,000 francs will be awarded annually for the best original work on any phase of the problem which may contribute to its final solution, on the principle that any progress whatever which may be made will be of scientific value.

While the idea of traveling to Mars or the moon, and particularly the possibility of ever getting back, appears ridiculous at present, future generations may find a way to do it. Thirty years ago most people thought anyone who predicted that man would ever fly at all was a little off in the head.

RADIO IN THE FAR NORTH

Mail which has recently come from Canadian outposts within the Arctic Circle tells of the gratitude of the inhabitants of the Far North for the radio programs which they have enjoyed during the past long winter.

Many letters addressed to the Canadian Westinghouse Company express appreciation of the personal messages from loved ones at home which are permitted to be sent on certain nights. An example is one from L. A. Learmouth, stationed at Chesterfield Inlet, who said:

"I was able to hear messages from my folks in Toronto and Montreal. It is an immense service you are rendering to all who must dwell in these isolated regions."

Great as is the enjoyment derived from the radio by people who live in the centers of civilization, it is nothing to compare with that experienced by those in remote sections of the world.

NEW NON-STOP RECORDS

While the world's sympathies have been aroused by the plight of the fated Italia's crew and those attempting their rescue in the Arctic, two of General Nobile's fellow-countrymen have brought to Italy the new non-stop distance record for airplanes.

Captain Ferrarin and Major Delprete flew from Rome to a point near Natal, Brazil, an airline distance of 4.417 miles in fifty-two hours. The actual distance flown is estimated at 4,542 miles. The same men set a new endurance flight record of fifty-eight hours thirty-four minutes on June 3, but it was beaten on July 7 by Riticz and Zimmerman, Germans, who flew an hour longer.

The Italians' distance flight brkoe the record of Chamberlin and Levine by more than 500 miles. How long their new record will stand is a question, but it seems that the airplane of the present is only limited in distance by the amount of gasoline it can carry. Great improvements in stability and motor poyer have been made in recent years and the time seems near when the mechanical difficulties of flying will be largely overcome.

From the Wrights' first flight of 12 seconds in 1903 to one of 59 hours in 1928 is a long stride. Who can envision what the next twenty-five years will bring forth?

WAR ON PESTS COSTLY

Few persons, even among those engaged in the fight, realize the enormous cost of the warfare which must be continually waged against the various forms of insect and plant pests. It is estimated that the time and money expended for this purpose in the United States represents a loss of two billion dollars a year.

In spite of this mighty effort, insects and plant disease destroys between 10 and 15 per cent of all food raised. This situation also confronts Canada and South America, and to a large extent the entire world.

A new menace which is rapidly spreading is the European corn borer, which has recently been causing farmers great concern. Among others which are particularly destructive may be mentioned the Japanese beetle, boll weevil, leaf hopper, red spider and an almost endless list of minor pests.

An eminent scientist declares that if continuous warfare were not waged against these destructive agencies they would cause a loss of 60 per cent of all crops. It is therefore imperative that every possible means should be employed to check their ravages if the world is not to face starvation in the future.

INDUSTRY SCATTERS

Instead of further concentrating in the larger cities, the present tendency of industrial plants is toward the smaller towns, according to a recent magazine writer, who considers this one of the most far-reaching movements of recent years.

Some of the reasons for this decentralization of industry are given, among them being the bringing of the factories closer to the raw materials and the ultimate consumer, thus reducing transportation charges; the extension of cheap electric service to the smaller cities and towns; lower living costs and better surroundings for employees, and in many cases a more intelligent and more dependable labor supply.

Summing up the results which this movement will bring about, the writer says that from now on we may expect to see a marked movement toward these smaller cities and towns, instead of having vast populations necessary for large production herded together in a few big cities.

This trend of industry affords the small town its opportunity to share in the benefits of industrial pay rolls. Besides, the industrial workers create a better market for farm produce. Thus industry and agriculture may go hand in hand in the upbuilding of those communities that take advantage of their opportunities in this direction.

GANGSTER FUNERALS

Recent accounts of funerals of assasinated gang leaders of the underworld in Chicago and elsewhere indicate that at the present time these gentry are put away with pomp and circumstance far beyond that accorded useful citizens of any station.

One of the latest to be accorded ostentations burial was Frankie Uale, alias Frankie Yale, notorious gangster shot to death in his automobile in Brooklyn, whose body was encased in a $15,000 silver casket and deposited in an expensive steel vault.

His funeral was attended by more than 5,000 persons, many from the underworlds of Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and New York City, and is said to have surpassed that of Dion O'Bannion, Chicago gang leader, who was buried with much display of wealth not long ago.

Such glorification of criminals is a rather sad commentary on our boasted civilization. But there seems to be no way to do anything about it.

JOINT BAND CONCERTS

There is much to commend in the action of the town bands of Columbus and West Point, in Mississippi, where the two organizations have combined forces for a series of open air concerts, alternating between the two places.

Many towns have small bands which are creditable enough according to numbers, but which have not sufficient players to render a concert program very acceptably. By combining occasionally with similar bands in neighboring towns some very attractive concerts would be possible. All that would be necessary to accomplish this would be a little co-operation between the respective leaders in obtaining the same music and holding joint rehearsals as opportunity permitted, the leaders taking turns in directing the combined bands.

Besides the better musical effects obtainable, such a plan would make for neighborliness and good will between the communities concerned.

FEWER PEOPLE LEAVING FARM

The movement of population from farms to cities continued during 1927 but at a less rapid rate, it is found in reports recently available. It is estimated that a net movement of 604,000 persons left farms last year, compared with 2,200,000 in 1926 and 1,900,000 in 1925. Only a small reduction, however, it is shown in farm population to 27,699,000 on January 1, 1928, compared with 27,892,000 on the same date last year.

The decrease in the number of farm people going to the cities is considered to reflect improved agricultural conditions, the disillusionment of those who sought better economic conditions in cities, and the slackening of industrial employment.—Forbes Magazine.

HAVE YOU HEARD THIS ONE?

The party of diners had finished an elaborate repast and as the waiter approached with the check, the Scotchman in the party was heard to say "Give me the check, please."

A polite murmer of dissent arose, but the Scotchman's voice broke in, "Gentlemen, I insist."

Thereupon the waiter presented him with the bill. He grew very red, but unwound the string from his purse and slowly counted out the amount due.

Later that night newsboys were heard calling out "Extra! Scotchman murders ventriloquist in hotel."

PEDRO GRADE PLAN FINALLY APPROVED

Plans and specifications for the removal of the Pedro mountain grade in San Mateo county, in connection with the 88-mile Oceanside boulevard from San Francisco to Santa Cruz, was approved Monday afternoon at a meeting of the board of directors of the Tri-County Highway District in San Francisco.

County Engineer George M. Kneese, who will have charge of removing the grade, stated that it was the only major obstacle that stood in the path of rapid construction of the scenic route. "If we have no trouble acquiring rights of way, and we expect very little trouble from that source, we will start elimination of the grade before winter," Kneese declared. "Survey work is already under way, and the fact that the rest of the route, outside the Wadell creek section in Santa Cruz county, is in good shape indicates that completion will be speeded up."

Lloyd Bowman, Santa Cruz county engineer, will have charge of the Wadell creek project, and will also survey the location of the connection with San Mateo county.

Supervisors of San Mateo county and San Francisco expressed confidence that the new highway would divert much of the heavy Peninsula traffic from the El Camino and Bay Shore highways, speeding up traffic, and cutting down the time for the long trip to Santa Cruz county.

STOCKTON PREPARING FOR AMERICAN LEGION MEETING

California's six wearers of the Congressional Medal of Honor, awarded for World war service, the highest decoration conferred by the United States government for bravery in battle, will be the honor guests of the American Legion next month at the tenth annual state convention of the World war veterans' organization to be held at Stockton, August 13 to 15. The six wearers of the Congressional medal of honor are: David E. Hayden, Santa Ana; Louis T. Van Iersel and Chester H. West, both of Los Angeles; Colonel Nelson M. Holderman, commandant of the Veterans' Home at Yountville; Edward Izac, of San Diego, and Public Administrator Phil C. Katz, of San Francisco.

Invitations have been sent to the six World war heroes by State Adjutant James K. Fisk of the Legion, and all are expected to attend the big convention, plans for which are rapidly nearing completion, according to word from Stockton.

The Stockton convention is expected to be the best attended in the history of the American Legion in this state and elaborate plans are being made for the entertainment of the visiting World war veterans, their families and friends. James V. Dollahite, of Stockton, is chairman of the committee in charge of the convention arrangements.

The Forty and Eight Society, the playground of the Legion, will hold its annual convention simultaneously with that of the parent organization. Forty bands, drum and bugle corps have already signified their intention of attending the conclave and competing for the prizes to be offered them. Golf, swimming, tennis and trap-shooting constitutes the program of competition already arranged by the Stockton committee.

SIDELIGHTS

A perfect husband has been located in England. He gets breakfast, scrubs the floors, does the washing and most of the other housework, works every day and gives his wife all his wages, never leaving her alone at night. This all came out when she sued him for divorce.

A news item states that only one out of 20 among Milwaukee's working girls wear a corset. Information as to how and by whom the survey was made was not given.

The age limit for postmasters upon first entrance into the service has been raised from 65 to 68 years. Why not? Some of the World War generals were older than that.

Real kleptomaniacs are often found plying their avocation of petty thievery for no appaernt reason. The wife of a noted musician in New York was caught stealing a child's garment. Search of her home revealed a complete child's wardrobe, although she has no children.

An elaborate reception planned for the Bremen over-sea flyers in Cologne, Germany, was called off because they had visited the exiled Kaiser in Holland. It hasn't been so many years ago that being the guest of Willhelm II would have been considered quite an honor in itself.

O. O. McIntyre declares the dumbest girl in New York has been found. She was fired from a 5 and 10 cent store because she couldn't remember the prices.

Sterilized kissing is being warmly discussed in London and various methods of avoiding germ transmission have been suggested. Mrs. Edith Corvan doesn't think much of such innovations, which she characterizes as "non-infectious, non-corrosive and non-sensical."

Whether to spell it Pekin or Peking has been settled at last. It's Peiping.

SAN FRANCISCO INVITED TO VISIT OUR BIG TREES

All of San Francisco, and especially supervisors of the metropolis, have been extended an invitation to visit the San Mateo Memorial Grove on August 1. Supervisor Hickey, in extending the invitation, said: "Why travel hundreds of miles to see the redwoods when San Francisco has right at her door one of the finest groves of virgin redwoods in the state, a place big enough for a million people to picnic and enjoy nature?"

Supervisor Hickey said that the Memorial Grove is one of the big reasons why San Francisco should urge that the Oceanside highway to Santa Cruz be built as soon as possible. It has 12,000 acres of virgin trees, and is the finest playground in the state.

WARNED TO COMPLY WITH LUGGAGE REQUIREMENTS

Be sure that luggage packed on the running board of your car complies with the requirements of the state law. This is the warning issued by the touring bureau of the California State Automobile Association to all motorists before starting on a vacation trip. The state division of motor vehicles is engaged in a campaign of enforcement of the law prohibiting luggage from extending beyond the line of the hub caps on the left side of a car or more than six inches beyond the hub cap line on the right side. There have been a number of serious accidents traced to violations of this provision since the vacation travel season started.

OLD TIME BALL PLAYERS HAVE GAME TOMORROW

This Saturday afternoon, July 28, starting at 1 o'clock, the old time professional ball players of the past 45 years are going to stage a six inning game at the Oakland baseball park, preceding the regular Pacific Coast League game, Oakland vs. Hollywood.

Last year the old timers' game was the hit of the season, so much so that the ball fans have been pleading for another game. Over 100 old timers were on hand from all parts of California, the majority being stars in their day of baseball, and all received a great ovation from the big crowd.

It was a thrilling treat to see that famous old battery of 45 years ago perform as of old—George Van Halren, pitcher, and Fred W. Lange, catcher—catching barehanded as they used to do before baseball gloves were invented. Big John Tiedemann, a member of the championship Oaks of 15 years ago, brought the crowd to its feet by knocking a regular home run over the left field fence. A number of old timers are going to try to duplicate this home run on the 28th.

Castoria is a comfort when Baby is fretful. No sooner taken than the little one is at ease. If restless, a few drops soon bring contentment. No harm done, for Castoria is a baby remedy, meant for babies. Perfectly safe to give the youngest infant; you have the doctors' word for that! It is a vegetable product and you could use it every day. But it's in an emergency that Castoria means most. Some night when constipation must be relieved—or colic pains—or other suffering. Never be without it; some mothers keep an extra bottle, unopened, to make sure there will always be Castoria in the house. It is effective for older children, too; read the book that comes with it.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Refund of $4,500,000 to the State of California in a lump sum will be sought at the next session of Congress by Governor Young's Curry flood control bill committee. At its session in the office of A. R. Heron, director of finance, a few days ago, the committee named Wm. P. Dwyer, Fred Kliesen and State Senator Frank S. Boggs as a sub-committee to plan utilization of this refund.

Daily airplane passenger service between Portland and San Francisco will be put into effect August 1 by the West Coast Air Transport Company, Charles V. Eakin, president of the firm, has announced. The company has been operating on a tri-weekly schedule, but with delivery later this month of two new Bach monoplanes of the eight passenger type, sufficient equipment will be available for the new service.

The forest fire situation in California was reported to be improving a few days ago by forestry officials, although several blazes are being brought under control with difficulty. More than 100,000 acres of brush and forest land have been burned over in the state. New fires are reported in Fresno, Tuolumne and Placer counties. Santee, near San Diego, is said to be directly in the path of a blaze.

Warning that "use of mussels on the California coast during the summer months is always connected with some danger" was issued last week by the State Department of Public Health. Calling attention to the fact that 102 persons were poisoned and six died from eating mussels a year ago this month, the department's warning said that "poisonous mussels cannot be distinguished from sound mollusks either by appearance or behavior on cooking."

Approximately $1,000,000 already has been pledged privately toward matching the proposed $6,000,000, state bond issue for development of a comprehensive state park system, it was announced a few days ago by Colonel Charles B. Wing, chief of the division of parks. Surveys now are being made by Frederick Law Olmstead, the commission's park expert, Wing said, as to the desirability of various properties suggested by local interests for state park purposes.

There were 23,12,315 motor vehicles registered in the United States at the beginning of this year. This represents an increase of 5.1 per cent of the registration for the year previous. Seven states had more than a million registration in 1927. They were New York, 1,937,918; California, 1,693,195; Ohio, 1,570,734; Pennsylvania, 1,554,915; Illinois, 1,438,985; Michigan, 1,154,773; Texas, 1,111,407. Indiana with 813,637 was the next in line.

How many blonde flapper twins are there in California? Do gentlemen really prefer them? Anita Loos seems to have proved the popularity of blondes, taken one at a time, but the state government, it was announced last week, intends to test them in pairs. The relative attractions of blondes and brunettes will be determined at a state-wide twin contest to be staged during the state fair, the gentlemen in this case being the exhibit judges of the 1928 exposition. State prizes are to be awarded for the prettiest blonde twins, the most captivating brunette twins, the oldest twins, the youngest twins, the twins most resembling each other and the family with the most twins.

The State Tax Commission presumably will recommend to the next Legislature a tax on banks measured by their net incomes from all sources. This, W. J. Carr, a member of both the tax and state railroad commissions, declared in an address in Los Angeles at the University of California at Los Angeles last week. The commission was appointed by Governor Young to investigate and report on the tax problem after the 1925 law that intangible securities should be taxed only on seven per cent of their assessed valuation was complicated by an amendment passed by the 1927 Legislature and then declared unconstitutional by the State Supreme Court.

California has 833,508 pupils enrolled in public elementary and secondary schools, an increase of over 50,000 or 6.1 per cent, as compared with the 1926-27 year, it was announced a few days ago by Walter E. Morgan, chief of the division of research, state department of education. Morgan said the school attendance gains indicate that "the temporary check to California's population increase experienced between 1924 and 1926 has been overcome." The elementary schools have an enrollment of 629,696, an increase of 5.44 per cent; the high schools have 199,421 in attendance, a jump of 10.21 per cent and the junior colleges have 4,391 students, a gain of 52.04 per cent.

Byrle F. Babcock, secretary of the Sacramento Lions' Club and officer of a Sacramento investment company, last week, was appointed deputy state director of finance. Announcement was made by Director Alexander R. Heron and former Senator Lyman King of the Department of Finance.

State Treasurer Charles S. Johnson last week supervised destruction at the municipal incinerator of bonds drawn for $8,028,147.55. The bonds, bearing date of 1927, were originally for the financing of the Secramento San Joaquin reclamation district but had never been sold.

HUGGINS GIVING YOUTHS CHANCE

Proves He Is One of Smartest Pilots in Baseball.

One player with whom Miller Huggins has dared to experiment is Shealey, a young pitcher from St. Paul. Without Pipgras, Shealey and Durocher, the Yankees wouldn't have such a high standing as they enjoy at the present time. He isn't the only manager who is taking chances.

Forced to do so because his older players did not meet expectation, John McGraw has inserted young Melvin Ott into the Giants' lineup. Ott has been with the Giants a full year, looking on from the bench most of the time, so that McGraw, after all, is continuing his old policy.

Connie Mack made changes for 1928 in the Athletics. He used the old-timers as his mainstay because they could bat, pitting them against the speed and cocksureness of the youngsters who are coming on. And while Connie today is much better off as regards his team's percentage than he was a year ago, the club isn't yet in a position to stop the Yankees.

It wasn't many years ago that the Yankee owner raced about New York telling his cronies that "Huggins was no good." Some of them swallowed all that he said and Huggins was sneeringly referred to as "Pint-Size" and as a manager without control of his team.

Today the Yankees' manager is generally regarded as one of the smartest men in baseball. And so he is. And so he was when he was manager of the St. Louis Cardinals and, unaided by money or much of anything else, kept that team in the fight and triumphed over a good many obstacles. The American league grabbed Huggins right from under the eyes of the National league owners. Garry Herrmann of Cincinnati knew that Huggins was going to the American league and did not attempt to prevent it. His colleagues censured him bitterly when they found it out, all too late.

Herrmann at that time was under the thumb of Ban Johnson and also thought he was doing Huggins a good turn. He did.

Caddie Is an Important Adjunct to Good Golfer

Good caddies do not just grow that way but must be trained with much care in order that they may give acceptable service for their employers. At no district club are better caddies found than at the Detroit Golf club. The reason there, too, is that the boys are drilled and instructed constantly.

Vincent Dolan is caddiemaster at the big North side club and holds classes for the little bag toters almost daily throughout the season. Sometimes as many as 100 are taken out on the course and drilled on how to hold the flag, where to stand and other features of their work. A caddie is an important adjunct to good golf and the player having an experienced and capable one at his side is most fortunate.

Unfortunately caddies come and go. It is estimated that more than 75 per cent of those who report each spring are new and know little or nothing of golf or caddying. They must be taken in hand and trained, which makes the caddiemaster's job especially important during the early weeks of the season.

Ed Walsh's Son Now on Staff of the White Sox

Once more the megaphone man will announce the name of "Big Ed" Walsh as the day's pitching hope of the Chicago White Sox.

Not the "Big Ed" of more than a decade ago, but his son, who is almost as large and who the Sox hope can get along in the majors as well as his father.

Young Walsh came fresh from a great season at Notre Dame, where he won several games and lost one. He is twenty-four years old, stands 6 feet 1 inch and has pitched excellent ball for the Notre Dame team for three years.

"I believe my son has got the stuff," remarked his famous father, who is now coaching the White Sox. "It may take some seasoning, but I think he'll be in there winning games before long."

New Catcher's Mask

This new clear-vision baseball catcher's mask worn by Bubbles Hargrave, of the Cincinnati Reds, has just made its appearance. Points of vantage claimed for this mask are unobstructed vision and a steel construction which will ward off the hardest of foul tips and even blows from the bat.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MR. SUN'S JOKE

"I don't feel blue," said Mr. Sun, "nor do I feel unhappy, nor sad.

"But I do feel a little spotty."

The fairies had been asking Mr. Sun what was the matter.

"There is a reason for the way I look," continued Mr. Sun.

"I am sure there must me," said Fairy Princess Joy.

"Will you tell us the reason?" asked Fairy Twilight Bell. "Do," urged the fairies.

"You know what very hot weather we have been having lately?" began Mr. Sun.

All the fairies nodded their heads.

"We know, Mr. Sun, it was very hard to keep cool, especially for the grownup, and the children, and the horses."

"Well, we've had a very hot wave. Now the hot wave came to me and said:

"'Look here, old Sun, people often say you give them freckles.

"'They say that, after all the good you do, too.

"'They forget that you cure them and make them well by your sunshine and that you make the flowers grow and the leaves come out in the spring.

"Old Hot Wave Talked to Me."

"'They just get angry at you if you give them freckles and try to hide their faces from you by broad-brimmed hats and sunshades.

"'What have you got to say to that, old Sun?'

"Now that made me quite annoyed. I get angry when I hear such things and, of course, when I get angry I blaze and it makes every one still warmer.

"Well, old Hot Wave talked to me like this and urged me on.

"'I'll help you,' he said. 'We'll get even with them.'

"So we went on a regular tear—and hasn't it been hot?"

"It most certainly has," said the fairies.

"But what do you think happened to me?" asked the Sun.

"The spots," said the fairies.

"Yes," said Mr. Sun, "the spots are freckles—freckles on the face of the sun.

"Just fancy that! Mr. Sun was the receiver of a number of freckles during the very hot season! Isn't that a joke on me?

"But I don't mind. It has been a record-breaking hot wave."

And learned men they call scientists took pictures of Mr. Sun and his freckles!

He Can Do Little

The leader, holding a cane or stick in his right hand, taps on the floor in rhythm as he says the sentence, "He can do little who can't do this." Before he begins, he clears his throat. He then asks how many players can do this trick as he has done it. The catch in this game is to clear your throat first, even though it may be an almost unnoticeable noise.

Would Bar Bachelors From Holding Office

To be eligible for the Presidency of the French republic a man must be the father of at least seven children, is one of the provisions of a bill proposed by M. Jean Rameau, with the idea of increasing the dwindling population of France.

A Frenchman who aspires to be a cabinet minister would have to have at least six children, according to the proposed law. If he had only five in his family, he could rise no higher than the senate. With four he might aspire to the chamber of deputies. To be mayor of a French town a man would have to have two children, and even a town councillor would be required to have one child, as one of his qualifications for office.

The author of the plan, relying upon the aspirations of his countryman for political careers, estimates that such a law would increase the French population 10,000,000 in ten years.

Particular

After Mr Winston Churchill had made his clever retreat on the kerosene tax he met a journalist in the lobby. He stopped him, and said: "Oh, Mr. Blank, what are they saying in the press gallery about my speech?" The journalist suggested that perhaps Mr. Churchill might not like a truthful reply but the latter insisted. "Well," said the journalist, "they are saying that you stood on your head because you hadn't a leg to stand on." —Nation and Athenaeum (London).

Speaking of Birds

When he turned to flee the big bird returned and struck him on the head knocking him unconscious.—Pathfinder Magazine.

CONSERVATION NOW PROBLEM OF WORLD

The time has come in the affairs of the world when international competition for raw materials and the great waste that ensues, must give way to international planning and organization for the conservation of raw materials if its present high standard of civilization is to be maintained.

Such is the opinion of Dean Henry F. Grady of the College of Commerce of the University of California, delivered at the Institute of International Relations at Seattle, Wash.

In roundtable discussions held during the institute, Dean Grady said in part: "International commerce has been developed on the basis of active competition between nations for the world's raw materials on the one hand, and for markets for the things fabricated from these materials on the other. Imperialism is a system by which the advanced and more powerful industrial countries have attempted to secure control of raw material for their industries and markets for the excess of their production. The war, however, has accelerated changes in the world which will make the empire of prewar days less and less a possibility. The world of the future is not going to accept an arrangement by which its manufacturing will be concentrated in northern Europe.

"The old type of international competition is rapidly passing and international planning and organization must take its place. This is particularly imperative in the case of essential raw materials whose world supply is limited. The continued developement of world industry taken as a whole and consequently the advance of our present civilization cannot be assured until devastating competition for raw materials with the great waste it implies shall be discontinued. There are a great many replaceable raw materials such as agricultural products, but the world's supply of minerals is nonreplaceable and these must be conserved if the present high order of civilization in the world is to be maintained and advanced. I am referring particularly to such minerals as manganese, chromite, tungsten, mica, petroleum, etc. We have but to contemplate the exhaustion of tungston, which is of great importance in the making of high-speed tool steel and incandescent lamp filaments, to realize what this would mean to a machine built civilization.

"One of the greatest problems facing the world today, therefore, is to bring about the organization of the facilities for international conservation of these essential raw materials upon which the welfare of the whole world depends."

FORGOT $25,000 CHECK

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh had to go to Washington to attend a social affair some time after he had received the Woodrow Wilson Peace Prize. He would need to wear his dress suit, so his hostess on Long Island, remembering Lindbergh's indifference to clothes, went to his room. She found that his dress suit was in a badly crumpled state.

"Why, this suit will have to be pressed at once," she said as she called a servant "There isn't much time. He's flying this afternoon."

Then a thought occurred to her. Perhaps there might be something of value in the dress suit. She really ought to go through the pockets.

The hostess searched the coat. In three pockets she found nothing. In a side pocket was a slip of paper. She looked at it. The slip of paper was a $25,000 check. It had been given to Colonel Lindbergh by the Woodrow Wilson Foundation. He had apparently forgotten it.—Forbes Magazine.

ALASKAN FARMER'S LOT CALLED WORLD'S EASIEST

Land where most of the farmers are bachelors whose work requires their closest attention only 90 days of the year was described when the work of Dr. C. C. Georgeson, representative of the United States Department of Agriculture, was recounted in The American Magazine.

"The Alaskan farmer," says Dr. Georgeson, who since 1900 has seen appropriations for agriculture in Alaska increase from $12,000 to $76,000 a year, "probably has an easier time than any other farmer in the world, once he is established." During his winter season, the farmer of this country which is famous in many states of the union for its fine berries, its potatoes, cabbages and a long list of products, works in the mines, hunts or engages in some other activity.

"Through years of experimenting," says the magazine of Dr. Georgeson's work, "he has evolved 170 kinds of potatoes suited to Alaska. In the Matanuska Valley farms have produced 11 tons to the acre. Potatoes form Alaska's most important crop today."

"LIGHTS OF NEW YORK" AT EMBASSY THEATRE

No innovation in the motion picture industry has aroused such general interest as the sound-reproducing device. Talking pictures have now become an assured fact and it is just a question of who makes the greatest strides that will demonstrate the leadership of the motion picture world.

The editor of Photoplay Magazine in the August number will say that before the end of the year one thousand theatres in the United States will be equipped with talking pictures. He goes further in announcing that by 1930 five thousand houses will be using sound-reproducing devices.

With this fact in view, by far the most interesting departure is the Warner Brothers epic, "Lights of New York," a tense melodrama of the New York underworld in which all of the dialogue is reproduced over the Vitaphone. It is the Embassy Theatre of San Francisco that has secured this advanced film and the theatre goers had their first view of a strictly talking motion picture on Thursday, July 25.

Four Vita acts and Movietone current news reel comprise the balance of the bill.

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME I FRIDAY, JULY 27, 1928 NUMBER 52

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Sandy, seeing America in his automobile, stopped one night at a small hotel.

"How much for a room?" he asked.

"Three dollars."

"Terrible. And how much for breakfast?"

"One dollar."

Ruination! How much to keep my car in the garage for the night?"

"Use of garage is free."

"Oh, well, just book me for garage and breakfast. I'll sleep in the car."

Doctor: "And did you follow my directions and drink hot water one hour before breakfast?"

Patient: "I did my best, doctor, but I couldn't keep it up for more than ten minutes."

Wife: "And when do I give it to him?"

Doctor: "You don't give it to him—just take it yourself."

Now is the time to buy your winter coal.

"Say, Big Boy, I think you are cheating."

Big Boy: "How do you yet that way? How am I cheating?"

"Well, I'll swear I never dealt you that Ace."
